Welcome to the June issue of our 'Work Hard; Be Kind; Well-being' newsletter!

There'll be an issue of this newsletter each month until the end of this academic year (July).

This is your 'one stop shop' for information and resources to support you during your children's time out of school.

Please also see our newsletter for pupils in addition to this one for you.

1. What is 'well-being'?

It's a term we hear a lot but what does it mean?

Dictionary definitions tell us that it's about comfort, health and happiness. Essentially, it's about our emotional as well as our physical health: keeping our minds and our bodies healthy!

Here's a short video which might give you some ideas about what 'well-being' means <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=oSlWo5nxF2A> and another one with ideas for how you could develop yours: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yF7Ou43Vj6c>. Aimed at children but applicable to adults, too!

2. Information, guidance and updates

Gratitude – an article by Rebecca Morgan-Jones

How to start a gratitude practice:

- To remember when we feel bad to look outside of ourselves is a quick fix, if we go inside then we are making lasting, long term change.
- Consistency is the key – start small.
- Get into a routine – dedicate a time of the day when you can practice gratitude. Either in the morning or at night or both. Studies have shown if we dedicate 20 seconds at a time to gratitude it's long enough to create positive structural changes to the brain.
- Think of 3 things first thing in the morning and three things last thing at night that you are grateful for.
- Leave mobile phones out of the room, as this will stop you looking at them as soon as you wake up. This time could be spent thinking of great stuff that will start your day off on a positive start.
- If you're having a really bad day, (which you still will have even when you've practiced gratitude for 10 years) the difference will be that you will be able to get yourself out of it much quicker. Practice moment to moment gratitude, where you say thank you for everything. So, your encouraging yourself to see the best bits in everything. It helps us not lose sight of the good stuff in the midst of a situation or event that is hard to deal with.
- Just say 'thank you' over and over again in situation where you may feel nervous or an emotion that is not helpful. You don't have to be saying 'thank you' for anything in particular, just the word has a positive impact on the brain, which has a knock on effect on how we feel and act.
- Set a timer on your phone that goes off every so often to remind you to stop and think of 3 things you are grateful for.
- Set passwords as words that remind you to be thankful.
- Create visual reminders like sticky notes, pictures or written text.
- Add gratitude onto another thing you do. Maybe, when you're making your morning cup of coffee use this time to be thankful. Do it when you're sitting at traffic lights, waiting for the bus, brushing your teeth, in the bath etc.
- Be specific – being grateful for your friends is great, but what is it that they do that you are actually thankful for?
- The small things – the breeze on your skin, the sun on your face, a warm cosy bed. Encouraging our brain to see the small wins stops us wanting big fixes in life.

According to Harvard Happiness researcher, Shawn Achor, doing this for 21 days will encourage the brain to look at the world in a very different way. You'll see the world's positives rather than its threats.

- Write things down. Keep a journal, write in it every morning, night or throughout the day.
- Use a gratitude app.
- Write gratitude letters- these can be to yourself or someone else. You don't have to send them, just the act of writing down how you feel about someone can have profound effects on the way you feel. If you are brave enough to send them, it will not only make the participant feel fantastic, but it will make you feel great too. If you're really brave, actually read the letter out loud to that person yourself.

- Actually say 'thank you' to people.
- Encourage friends and family to have conversations that are grateful rather than negative. Set time aside at meal times for this.
- Set up a WhatsApp/Facebook groups where you and friend actively write and share the good stuff. We all too often moan when were with friends, try and lift each other up but celebrating your wins- big and small.
- If you have children get them to practice gratitude finish their day with this while tucking them in bed.
- Notice the good- the more we CHOOSE to see the good the happier we will be.
- Always ask yourself what are tuned into. Are you listening to negative or positive FM in your head? What frequency would you choose to tune in to? What's going to make you feel good?
